

Labour invested in Education for Our Children

New school 'topped out'

Labour Councillors were delighted to attend the topping out ceremony at the new Irlam & Cadishead High School recently. The brand new school costing £25 million is being built as part of the previous Labour Government's Building Schools for the Future.

The school will provide a 21st century learning environment and replace a collection of very tired 1960's buildings which had long since passed their sell-by date. Cllr Joe Kean commented: "Looking round the school today has taken my breath away. The facilities are going to be so brilliant for the students and something children in this area have deserved for a long time. Thank goodness the Labour Government started the BSF scheme, left to the Tories we'd have got nothing at all in the area because they are not interested in ordinary people."

ConDems Coalition Government have abolished the Building Schools for the Future Programme thus depriving Britain's children.

Labour supporting local people - New allotment site opens

At a time when more and more people are interested in gardening and 'going green' Salford City Council working with a group of local enthusiasts has recently re-opened the Cumberland Avenue allotment site in Cadishead.

The site which had been derelict for 15 years has been brought back into use, after a number of setbacks, in order to satisfy at least some of the growing waiting list for allotments in the area and is now fully occupied.

Cllr Christine Hudson commented: "I am really pleased to see the Council getting behind local people and fulfilling its pledge to provide allotments wherever there is significant demand. So many people want to grow their own vegetables these days I just hope we will be able to open more sites in the area where there is sufficient demand."
